

Here at The State of Women Institute, our daily mission is amplifying the voices of women and girls through programs and initiatives that support the creation of various forms of digital media like our The State of Women Podcast Network that launched this Fall.

The State of Women is a change agent in creating future women leaders who will excel in business, science, education, technology, policy, and beyond. Dedicated to ensuring women and girls have access to content that empowers and lifts. The power of SHE is endless, and HER potential is infinite.

We are committed to continuing our path to document and share the diverse stories of women and girls worldwide who inspire every generation through digital media. In working with these awesome women, there are noticeable gaps in equity beyond access to content. It is also essential to expand our mission to close the gaps in technology, health, education, and science.

The stories are just the beginning.
